In this issue (and we hope in issues to come) we would like to share a letter from one of your fellow alumni...

I can remember getting accepted to Husson, leaving home for the first time, meeting my first roommate, going to my first class, joining my fraternity, student government and other activities. I remember looking forward to Chief Week, Spring Fling, basketball games and the occasional painting of the rock. The friendships that I formed at Husson affect me nearly everyday. So why is it that after I graduated, I never looked back? I completely forgot about the place that I enjoyed for four years. Well, I did look back last fall – I went back to Husson and what I saw dramatically changed my feelings about my alma mater.

The most obvious change is apparent from the minute you drive on to campus. New facilities make the old Husson look like a one room schoolhouse and even newer facilities are under construction. Combine that with all the Best-In-Class athletic fields and you wouldn't even recognize College Circle. But looks are only skin deep. What really impressed me happened when I went inside.

The activity that exists in Peabody Hall (and throughout the entire campus) is amazing. I remember the new Furman Student Center was bustling with activity, the Starbucks was packed...yes Starbucks, on campus...and even the art gallery had visitors. In talking to the faculty about their classes, they demonstrated so much enthusiasm; they just couldn't wait to get started. The curriculums that are offered at Husson far exceed what I remember. The new Law, Pharmaceutical and Advanced Nursing majors are very well received by students and the New England School of Communications offers hands-on education that students can't get anywhere in northern New England...period. I remember talking with the students about their weekend's activities, their aspiration's and then watching them hurry to class. I can't recall having that level of enthusiasm as I went to my 9:00 o'clock classes and I certainly don't remember many people staying on campus over the weekends. That's not the case anymore – it's the place to be, the place to learn, the place to have fun, the place to live.

I was excited to be invited back and left with a new found pride in my alma mater. I strongly encourage all of you to contact the alumni office and make a trip back, see the new campus, grab a latté and enjoy. It will make you proud and will bring back a lot of good memories.

About the cover

For over 100 years, Husson has prided itself on the number of first generation students it has welcomed through its doors. Amanda Kitchen '05 is a prime example. She was the first in her family to attend college, earning both her undergraduate and graduate degrees at Husson. Kitchen currently serves as Husson's director of annual giving.

Kitchen was able to give a personal touch to a handful of students when she volunteered to instruct the Husson Experience, a new experimental course that was introduced last fall. The course was designed specifically to assist first-year students in making successful transitions to college life. An astounding 47% of this year's entering class consists of first generation students.

The Husson Experience was overseen by Dean of Students Sharon Wilson-Barker and instructed by a handful of Husson faculty and staff volunteers. "We are committed to providing the skills and supports students need to be successful in higher education," said Dean Wilson-Barker. Data gathered on students from fall 2007 showed that students who successfully completed the Husson Experience did better academically in their first semester than students who either withdrew from the class or who did not complete it successfully. Husson plans to offer this course to all entering freshman beginning in the 2008-2009 school year.

General Information

Husson supports equal opportunity in recruitment, admission, educational programs, and employment practices, and complies with all major federal and state laws and executive orders requiring equal employment opportunity and/or affirmative action.

Dear Friends,

We started as Shaw Business College and School of Penmanship in 1898, next we became Maine School of Commerce, Bangor Maine School of Commerce and, in 1947, Husson College. The Eastern Maine Medical Center School of Nursing joined in the 1980's, the New England School of Communications in the 1990's, and the Eastport Boat School and Unobskey College in 2007. Now, by declaration of the Board of Trustees, on October 11, 2008, at Homecoming, we officially become Husson University.

When I arrived at Husson some twenty-one years ago, Professor Lambros Karris took me aside and told me of his dream of Husson becoming a university. The discussion has waxed and waned yet, over the years, it has ridden a rising tide, with first the faculty, then the Alumni Association, then Student Government, and now the trustees lending their support. The hesitation has always been the desire for Husson to remain personal, approachable, and humble, with no elusions of grandeur. The challenge, as always, is to honor that vision, our mission, and dream.

The earliest talk of becoming a university centered on international recruitment. During the 1990s the case began to grow as Husson restructured itself into separate academic schools, merged with the New England School of Communications (NESCom), and added ever more graduate degrees, most recently, the Doctor of Physical Therapy, with pharmacy and law on the way. Finally, when the Board of Trustees decided to get the ball rolling last October, it was not so much a vote of aspiration but rather what they believed reflected facts – that we had already become a university.

So, what is Husson in 2008 that leads us to call ourselves a University? First, we are not small any more. Along with NESCom, we have well over 2000 traditional undergraduates, not to mention graduate and continuing education students. Our assets are closing in on $50 million, our operating budgets exceed $30 million. Second, we have multiple academic schools with all but one offering one or more graduate degrees. Our focus has never been, nor is it now, on liberal arts or Ph.D.s, but, rather on bachelor, masters and doctoral degrees that lead to licensure and professional careers, such as counseling, business, or therapy. Third, we have multiple locations, with students in such wide flung communities as Bangor, South Portland, Presque Isle, Calais and Eastport and, increasingly, online.

It is true, we are adding scholarly faculty, but at Husson our faculty have always focused less on research and more on the scholarship of teaching. It all adds up to a university, yet we still have the markings of what Husson has always been: a place to prepare graduates for professional careers, a place that reserves a special love for youth who are the first generation in their family to go to college, a place that is not just located “in” Maine, but truly “of” Maine. As for remaining personal, a major reason for multiple clubs and sports teams, and for dividing into several academic schools, is to create smaller affinity groups where students and faculty can really get to know each other. It is working.

As the trustees would put it, since we already are “Husson University,” it means we really do not need to change our existing ways. Our logo has been simply “Husson” since about 2000, and if there is ever a describer it usually is “a professional university in northern New England.” We will continue our informal collegiate atmosphere, revere our traditions, love our sports, eulogize our past classmates, colleagues, fraternity brothers and sisters, coaches and leaders, and cherish our memories of old. And, even as with “Husson College,” “Husson University” will strive to continue its traditions, entrepreneurial spirit, and institutional pride.

Husson has been your “College.” It is about to become your “University.”

Respectfully yours,

Dynamic School of Education prepares future educators for success

Armed with a B.S. in Business Education, Jackie Emerson '64 waved goodbye to Husson College and went to teach business classes at East Grand High School in Danforth, Maine.

She focused on rural education throughout her career, teaching in small communities like Danforth, Madawaska, and Van Buren, and she sent many a graduate off fluent in shorthand and able to "type like the wind." Today, Jackie substitutes in the Newport school system and looks back fondly on her Husson days. "We had really good instructors," she says. "They prepared us to go and teach anywhere."

Twenty five years later, Betsy MacGregor Webb '83 arrived at Husson with high expectations. She felt Husson was a "perfect fit" and chose it over out-of-state schools largely because of its small classes. Betsy received her bachelor's degree in Business Education in 1983, and after graduation, fielded five offers for teaching positions, finally choosing a job in the Wells/Ogunquit school system. "I felt that Husson opened so many doors for me," says Betsy. "The professors and instructors made sure we understood that teaching wasn't about working 8am to 3pm with snow days and summers off." Recently elected superintendent of the Bangor School District, Webb said she feels strongly that the Husson community – and professors who were truly role models – shaped and prepared her to be an educator in and outside of the classroom. "My education at Husson taught me that what I do in this classroom, what I do in this community, impacts the world." Betsy says her experience at Husson also instilled in her an enthusiasm for knowledge and a passion for life-long learning.

From its founding in 1898, along side commerce, shorthand, accounting and telegraphy, a program in teaching has been part of Husson's academic core. It evolved into formal degree offerings under Chesley Husson in the 1950's and became a school of Education in 2000 under the leadership of founding Dean Jim Doughty, class of 1961, and commenced graduate offerings in 2006. Today enrollments approach 200 students.

As educational needs and expectations evolve nationally, so does the degree program at Husson. "Of course teachers must enjoy working with young people," says Lynne Coy-Ogan, dean of Husson's School of Education. "But today, that's not enough. To become an effective educator in 2008 requires expertise in a variety of areas, from differential instruction to integrated technology to performance-based assessment of learning standards."

Coy-Ogan, who served as both a teacher and an administrator in Maryland and Maine, joined Husson in 2004 to head of the School of Education. Now, she looks forward to expanding program offerings as the school and its students prepare for the future. Coy-Ogan understands that though most education students at Husson are from Maine and that many will want to return to their own communities, the need to prepare them with a global outlook is vital. “Our goal, Husson’s goal, is to prepare students to embark on their careers ready to meet the challenges of teaching – whether they decide to at rural or inner city schools,” she says.

To prepare graduates to meet those challenges, the Husson School of Education offers programs designed for both traditional and nontraditional students. More than 200 students, along with 15 faculty members and adjunct instructors, bring a wide range of skills and experiences into the classroom. Undergraduates can earn a B.S. in elementary education, secondary education life sciences, or physical education, while graduate students can obtain expanded master’s degrees in school counseling. Two new programs, the Teacher Certification Program and the 2 + 2 Agreement, offer students nontraditional learning experiences. The Teacher Certification Program, designed for individuals who have an undergraduate degree and are interested in a career change, has been met with an overwhelming response in the two years it has been offered. More recently, Husson partnered with Eastern Maine Community College to offer students enrolled in EMCC’s associate’s program the chance to continue their education at Husson and to earn their bachelor’s degrees and teaching certificates. “We are really thrilled to be partnering with Husson in this way,” says Liz Russell ’82, ’91, Husson alumna and associate dean of students at EMCC. “It offers so much to our students and gives them that next step in their pursuit of education and career success.”

As the School of Education continues to expand programs and incorporate new learning opportunities, administrators keep three major initiatives close to heart. They plan to...

- Build a strong academic platform and make sure students have both the curriculum and technology experience necessary to be successful. “With federal and state mandates, such as No Child Left Behind and Maine Learning Results, keeping programs timely and current is demanding,” says Coy-Ogan. “And with the statewide laptop initiative, it’s imperative that Husson education students have extensive exposure to technology and are able to demonstrate its use as an effective instructional tool in the classroom.”

“It’s our job as educators to prepare students to be part of a global economy. We’re not preparing them for just one career, but to be adaptable and flexible.”

- Develop experiences that prepare students for the challenges of global education. “Many of our students grew up in small, rural Maine communities and come from first-generation college families,” says Husson President Bill Beardsley. “We want to offer experiential learning opportunities to strengthen students’ exposure to issues of diversity.” According to Beardsley, this initiative is accomplished by offering nontraditional student teaching opportunities and by hiring outstanding faculty to guide and mentor.
- Analyze the need for educators as a whole. A large percentage of Maine teachers will be eligible for retirement within the next five years, and many more will leave for higher paying jobs – a situation not exclusive to Maine. Nationally, many urban and rural communities begin each school year with vacancies, most in critical areas like math and science. It’s a trend that may stretch our national education system to its limits.

Long gone are the days when people graduated from high school and dedicated their lives to one career, one profession, one company. Also gone is the expectation that a high school diploma can lead to a good job like it did just 20 or 30 years ago. With the amount of technological information in our society doubling every two years, it is estimated that in just the next four years, 82% of available jobs will require a four-year college degree. The U.S. Department of Labor estimates that today’s youth will have 10 to 14 jobs by the time they are 38. Even more astounding is that, according to former Secretary of Education Richard Riley, jobs that will top the 2010 “in demand” list didn’t even exist in 2004. That means today’s educators must prepare students for jobs they can’t even envision. That’s quite a challenge.

While the future might seem intimidating, it shouldn’t be for Husson graduates, says Betsy Webb. “It’s our job as educators to prepare students to be part of a global economy. We’re not preparing them for just one career, but to be adaptable and flexible.”

Husson building to house theater $15M Meeting House seen as campus focus BANGOR – Gracie McCollum turns 5 next month, but she already understands the importance of keeping her public remarks brief. At Thursday’s groundbreaking of Husson College’s new Meeting House, which boasts a state-of-the-art 500-seat theater that will bear her name, Gracie took the microphone and turned to the crowd.

“Let’s dig dirt!” she exclaimed, then she grabbed a tiny shovel and got to work.

The Gracie Theater is an integral part of a $15 million, 55,000-square-foot facility that will serve as a focal point on campus. The Meeting House, which is scheduled to open in phases starting next fall, also includes classroom and faculty office space for the sciences and humanities; the Darling Atrium, a two-story public space named for Mary Ellen and Ed Darling of Glenburn; and the Cyr Alumni Center, named for Joe and Sue Cyr of Old Town.

These naming gifts put Husson within reach of its $6 million capital campaign goal, while the college will pick up the remaining $9 million.

“In old New England villages, the meetinghouse was a place where people came together, near the commons and the green,” Husson’s president, William Beardsley, told the group. “On this campus of 2,500 people, which has no academic and cultural gathering place, this will be our meetinghouse, next to our commons and Husson’s green.”

The complex fills a void on campus – both literally and figuratively. It completes the “circle” of campus buildings.

“It’s the first image you see on arrival,” said Kris Kowal of WBRC Architects-Engineers, the project’s architect. “This creates a collegiate, quad-type area between what’s existing and new.”

Because students must take classes in the sciences and humanities to fulfill Husson’s liberal arts requirements, the academic wing will see heavy use. It also will provide office space to nearly a third of the college’s faculty. The alumni center will house college archives as well as the hall of honors.

In the past, Husson has lacked a formal venue for concerts, public speaking events, convocation and theater productions. The addition of Bangor Theological Seminary to the campus also raised the need for a religious gathering place. The Gracie Theater will meet those demands while providing a new, midsize performing arts center for students and area residents.

“I felt it’s a wonderful thing for Husson,” said Gracie’s grandmother, benefactor Hilda Hutchins McCollum of Bangor, who joined her daughter and Gracie’s mother, Courtney McCollum, at the event.

Hilda Hutchins McCollum is known for her support of the arts - the Hutchins Concert Hall at the Maine Center for the Arts on the University of Maine campus is named for her parents, and she has been a key fundraiser there.

“This is a small venue, as opposed to the Maine Center, and I just felt it was a good thing,” she said.

Campus officials were quick to point out that the facility is not meant to compete with Greater Bangor’s existing venues. Beardsley envisions a place where Maine-based musicians, actors and performers can show off their talents. It’s also a perfect fit for Husson’s endowed Kenduskeag Chamber Recital series.

Maine Jobs Spotlight: Physical therapist Christen Niles, Blue Hill Memorial Hospital

How did you get started?

I became a physical therapist because I had PT after hip surgery when I was younger, and the idea of working in this profession just stuck!

“There is nothing more fulfilling than seeing a grateful smile at the end of a long road of hard work,” says Blue Hill Memorial Hospital physical therapist Christen Niles '06.

What training did you have?

I received my master's degree in physical therapy from Husson College in Bangor. This included professional course work, as well as three 8-week clinical affiliations in which students are paired with an experienced therapist to learn the necessary components of treating patients.

What skills are essential to your job?

The most important skill, I think, is communication. The ability to communicate effectively with rehabilitation team members, physicians and nurses, and most importantly, the patient, is absolutely critical to building the good relationships necessary to provide high quality of care.

What is a typical day on the job like?

There is no typical day! But I can always count on being busy with something. When the patient count is low, there is always paperwork to catch up on!

What's your favorite part of the job?

Watching patients reach their goals. There is nothing more fulfilling than seeing a grateful smile at the end of a long road of hard work. What's the greatest challenge? Melding my personality with all of the different personalities I run into on a daily basis. As I said before, communication is critical, and building solid relationships can be difficult sometimes.

But it is also very rewarding to accomplish that challenge and have a great team behind you, like the one we have at Blue Hill.

What kind of person succeeds in the job?

Someone who is not afraid of taking a challenge head-on every single day, and finds working with people to be very rewarding.

What advice would you offer to someone interested in a job in this field?

Study hard! Your education is the foundation upon which your career is built.

Occupational Therapy students travel to Portugal

This past Spring, Kimberly A. Davis, OTD, MS, OTR/L, Assistant Professor of Occupational Therapy (OT) at Husson, got to see Portugal. Not just a sightseeing trip as you might imagine. Rather she and four of her students took an in depth look at that country's latest work in the field of OT. Her four student companions, Karen Martin, Shelagh McGinley, Destiny Dinunno and Lindsay Choate stayed in the home of two Portuguese OT students, Ana and Tisha. “I was amazed at how integrated the ‘new’ practice framework was in their facilities,” Davis recalls. “I also learned, however, that while some work is on the cutting edge of new practices, many more of their facilities continue to use the medical model to frame their practice.” Ana and Tisha study at the Escola Superior de Saude do Alcoitao, one of Portugal's two OT schools offering three year programs. Graduates must come back to complete a fourth year while working in the field.

In July, Tisa came to Bangor in a return exchange spending three weeks here. “I wish to extend a special thanks to the many sites that treated Tisa to a first-hand look at our OT practices here in America,” Davis points out. Hosts included Rachele Hargreaves (EMMC), Jen Mitchell (Bangor Nursing and Rehab), Colleen Adams (TEC Center), Pam Doiron (Dorothea Dix Psychiatric Center), Nicole Nowell (Maine Veterans Home) and the OT at the Glenburn School. “If you ever get a chance to visit Lisbon,” Davis notes, “I highly recommend stopping in to see the amazing things the OT's are doing in this country.”

Studying global warming in Bermuda

Bermuda, aptly described in tourist pamphlets as a cosmopolitan and enchanting paradise, is also a test tube for the earth. As Bermuda goes, many feel, so goes the environment around the world.

Each Spring, Husson Fellow and teacher education faculty member Dr. Jeannie Hamrin and her husband Carl have led student environmental study groups to this test tube land with startling results. Merely 22 square miles in size, this tiny island mass is home to 67,000 inhabitants. It is, according to Professor Hamrin, a land in search of balance between man and environment.

“Changes in the environment can be readily observed here,” Hamrin explains. “Students easily grasp the immediate effects of man’s impact on the environment.” For some 20 years she and a group of students have set sail to study the effects that density, time, and climate are having on this “island paradise.” Here, as in few places on earth, balance is the key to survival on a changing planet.

Entitled “SC 499: Bermuda: Island Survival/Planet Survival – A Delicate Balance” this course is arranged in cooperation between Professor Hamrin, Husson College and the Bermuda Institute of Ocean Sciences. Indeed, balance is the name of the game, Hamrin emphasizes. Dependent upon the outside world for all essentials – there are no fresh water lakes, rivers or streams existent there – Bermudians have come to understand that in order to sustain their way of life they must find the means to balance urbanization, crowding, traffic and pollution with its concomitant loss of nature and the effect those changes perpetrate upon the fragile environment that encases their lives.

“We are not trying to provide the answers for our students. Rather, we place them into a microcosm of the planet that causes them to consider many of life’s tough questions and forces them to consider very different viewpoints,” Hamrin explains. “Many who have gone through this adventure have found it to be a life changing experience.” This past March, not only did the 15 Husson students study in this world-class setting, they socialized at night with residents, and students from Columbia University. Several carried out a service project of cleaning a rare but critical fresh water pond.

Bermuda is made up of some 220 mainly disconnected islands. Bridges and causeways connect only seven of the twenty inhabited islands among that number. In addition to the indigenous population, some 500,000 tourists visit those 20 islands every year. Balance comes down to attitudes toward development and environment. It is important to Professor Hamrin that her students see this struggle at work. “Our students meet with developers and environmentalists. They witness both sides of the argument and must come to their own conclusions as to how to achieve and maintain the fragile balance of man and nature often at odds with each other.”

Some of the most interesting conservation projects in the world are being conducted in sanctuaries established on a few of Bermuda’s most secluded islands. Among these is “Non Such” Island, one of the most pristine sections of Bermuda’s National Park system. Few are invited to this treasured spot. Hamrin’s students must snorkel to the site as no other approach is possible. They spend much of their time involved in the work that has led to the successful eradication of various invasives – both biological and man made -- that have threatened to strangle the natural vegetation and life there.

The presence, for instance, of large quantities of plastics in the open ocean surrounding Bermuda has become a matter of considerable concern. It is a concern reflected among conservationists around the world. “Flotsam circulates in areas where natural vegetation has in the past provided habitat for a variety of marine species,” Hamrin notes. “This invasive substance causes animals to become ill, injured and often die. Students see the results and study ways to deal with this onslaught.”

Among the animal life unique to Bermuda are the giant sea turtles that once were in such huge numbers that they became a staple diet among the islanders. The slaughter became so acute that in 1610 Bermuda prohibited the harvesting of these animals in what became the first conservation law in the world. Working with the scientists who observe and protect this remarkable species has become an integral part of the experiences provided students who undertake this journey.

“Students come to experience first hand the simple fact that we can change the course of environmental neglect,” Professor Hamrin points out. Each student conducts their own mini research project in the field and in the lab and formally presents their findings. “We ask them to interpret data from experimental results and use their interpretations to draw conclusions on their own – to accept or reject hypotheses that directly relate to the changing environment they have witnessed first hand.”

Indeed, ecologically speaking, it can be said that as Bermuda goes so goes the rest of the world. “I want our young men and women to discover that we can take care of this earth of ours,” Professor Hamrin states fervently. “We can bring it back. It’s not too late. It’s up to each one of us.”

For information about this course open to Husson College students and selected high school students, contact Professor Jeannie M. Hamrin at 207-941-7130 or via email at hamrinj@husson.edu. The next trip to Bermuda will take place in March of this year. There is also the possibility of a trip to Mexico during the summer of 2008.

In addition, the Gracie Theater’s design incorporates learning laboratories for students in the New England School of Communications. Instead of one small sound and lighting booth at the back of the house, this theater has three classroom-size booths. Husson worked with acoustic and theater consultants from Walters Storyk Design Group of New York to create an educational space that incorporates cutting-edge technology.

“Our students will use these as virtual classrooms during performances and rehearsals for sound and light,” said Thom Johnston, NESCOM’s president.

Johnston envisions majors in theater arts and drama in the not too distant future, as well as expanded opportunities for other NESCOM students who already have experience with backstage, “tech crew” duties. The theater has a built-in, second-story video booth, which will allow students and faculty to use the facility as a sound stage as well.

“The lab side of this has all kinds of potential,” Johnston said.

For John Rohman, a principal at WBRC and the chairman of the Maine Arts Commission, every aspect of the project has potential – for the campus and the creative economy.

“When you think of what it’s going to do for the arts in Bangor, when you think of what it’s going to do for Husson - it will give more opportunities for folks in the pharmacy school - that’s what we’re trying to attract,” Rohman said. “I’m really excited about this.”

Admissions

Enrollment continues to climb as we have added new programming and athletic opportunities at Husson.

The entering class for the fall of 2007 had a 20% increase in applications that led to a 21% increase in the size of the entering class and overall the college experienced a 5% increase in overall undergraduate enrollment for day and CED. Our entering class for Day school came from eighteen states; six countries and 47% were first-generation college. Five of the entering students were valedictorians of their class and sixteen were salutatorians. Seventy-five had been class officers including twenty-six that were their class presidents. We have seen an increase in the number of students applying on-line instead of doing a paper application with 45% received electronically this year.

It appears that we are continuing our growth with a current 8% increase in applications for the fall of 2008 over last year. Your continued support and positive impact in your communities has enhanced our growth and reputation and we appreciate all that you do for Husson College.

alumni hall of fame

A highlight of the Homecoming activities brought the College community together to honor the following inductees into the Alumni Hall of Fame for 2007.

Edward H. Hemmingsen, Jr. '72 MEX
BS in Business Administration

Ed Hemmingsen served in Vietnam as a helicopter pilot. He entered Husson and took the results of a marketing project he did for a class his senior year at Husson and turned it into The Sunshine Company. This very successful company develops and prints regional coupon books that are distributed to area businesses across the State of Maine. Ed and his wife Judy then began purchasing and building apartment homes in Bangor. They then fulfilled a lifelong dream and purchased the Bluenose Hotel in Bar Harbor and developed it into one of the most successful lodging places in New England. The restaurant at the Bluenose Hotel received a five diamond rating by AAA in 2000. Only 41 restaurants in the country received that distinction in the year 2000. Ed and his wife Judy now live in Belfast, Maine.

Marcia G. Corradini, Esq. '94, '97
BS and MS in Business Administration
Marcia Corradini of Cape Elizabeth, Maine, is an attorney with Jensen Baird Gardner & Henry, a highly recognized midsized firm located in Portland, Maine. She received her J.D. from Franklin Pierce Law Center and is admitted to practice law in both Maine and Massachusetts. Her practice is concentrated in commercial and real estate law, including acquisition, construction-related financing, leasing, exchange transactions, title insurance, and conveyancing. She became an attorney after having worked for 10 years as a paralegal. She has served with the Volunteer Lawyers Project in developing their consumer hotline and serves as the chairman of the Raymond Town Office Library Building Committee.

CSM John J. Leonard, Jr. '78
BS in Business Administration
John Leonard, Jr., a native of Southwest Harbor, joined the Marine Corps in 1965 and served in Vietnam. In 1972 he joined the Maine Army National Guard in Bangor as a helicopter crew chief. After 16 years of service he achieved the rank of State Command Sergeant Major, the highest enlisted rank in the United States Army. In 1990 he was ordered again to active duty and served in Southwest Asia. Upon his return he was selected to become the Command Sergeant Major and Senior Enlisted Advisor to the Army National Guard in Washington, D.C. Among his dozens of honors, he has been awarded the Legion of Merit with one oak leaf cluster and the Meritorious Service Medal. He and his wife Sharon live in Warner Robins, Georgia.

Paul Husson
Husson Honorary Alumnus
Paul Husson personifies Husson College. He was born and raised and has spent virtually his entire professional career at Husson College. Paul carries on the legacy of his dad who transformed a tiny bankrupt proprietary business school into a regionally accredited, non-profit baccalaureate college on the College Circle we see today.

Working with President Del Merrill, Paul led the admissions effort that pulled our institution out of financial duress. When Paul realized its student body was too provincial, he led the college into international recruiting, and led I.C.L.S., our International Center for Language Studies. Today as our senior development officer, Paul is our tie to our history, to his father's dreams, to our alumni around the world and to each other.

Paul is an active member of the Bangor Lion's Club. He and his wife Judy enjoy life together on Green Lake in Dedham.

Each year the Husson Alumni Association selects new inductees. We seek your support. Please contact the alumni office to request a nomination form.

Husson inducts five into Sports Hall of Fame

Nearly 200 people welcomed the newest members of the Husson College Sports Hall of Fame at a dinner and ceremony held Friday, September 28, 2007, as part of Homecoming activities. Guests traveled from as far away as Kent, England and Charlotte, North Carolina to attend the event. There were five new members inducted and the College retired the jersey numbers for former Husson stars Clara Swan and John "Jack" Scott.

Clara L. Swan '33 coached Women's Basketball at Husson for 19 years with a win-loss record of 241-34 including two undefeated seasons. In 2002 on her 90th birthday the college dedicated the Clara Swan Center.

John "Jack" Scott '62 played basketball at Husson during three seasons from 1958-1961 and his teams had a combined record of 51-3. Jack went on to have a legendary career as a coach.

Matt Dutille '93 played baseball at Husson from 1988-1993 and was named to the All-District team each of his four years and was in the top 5 NAIA national rankings for strikeouts and in ERA. In his senior year he was a NAIA All-American Honorable mention.

1995 and 1996 he was a 2nd team All American.

Rich Mazurek '94 of Rockland, Maine played basketball at Husson from 1990-1994. He served as tri-captain his senior year, he scored 1,505 points for his career and was a career 77% free throw shooter. Rick was a recipient of the Nelson Degrasse Award given for athletic ability and sportsmanship.

the 1992-93 squad that advanced to the NAIA Final Four, is 2nd all-time with 904 rebounds, scored 1,131 points and is fourth all time in blocks. She was named an Academic All American in 1995.

Kissy Walker '03 of Bangor has become one of the premier college coaches in Maine. She began her coaching career in 1989 and after a brief hiatus is at the helm today. She has recorded 302 wins and has taken her team to the national tournament five times. Walker's 1992-93 team advanced to the NAIA Final Four losing to the team that won the National Championship that year.

Adam Heasley '97 of Kent, England, played soccer from 1993-1997. He was named team MVP all four years and served three times as Captain. He scored 59 goals and had 66 assists, was MAC Rookie of the Year in '93 and Player of the Year all four years. In Tara Leavitt Mayo '94 of Hampden, Maine, played basketball from 1992 to 1996. Tara was a member of 50th reunion!

The 50th reunion for the Class of 1957 was held on November 8, 2007. The full day of activities began with a luncheon in the G. Peirce Webber Campus Center. The honored guests, Jackie Huggins, Wanda Thomas, Marion Olmsted, Ray Martin, Judy & Frank Morgan, were greeted by Clara Swan '33, and surrounded by memorabilia bringing back 50 years of Husson memories. Anibal Sanchez, a current student, joined the guests for lunch and talked about life as a Husson student today. A tour of the campus was the highlight of their day. A demonstration of "Sim Man" in the nursing department and the NESCOM facilities were a testimony to Husson's commitment of excellence for the students they serve.

Husson goes to Boston

Here are just a few of the alumni who came from many different directions to join us in Boston for an evening of celebration.

Husson Cruisin '08

What a way to begin the year! This January forty-two alumni, friends, and family from Maine to Florida and the U.K. boarded the luxury Carnival Liberty cruise ship and set sail for the Western Caribbean. In Jamaica, we climbed the Dunns River Falls and meandered through the Enchanted Gardens; and in Nassau, Dolphin encounters at Blue Lagoon and snorkeling were a couple of the adventures of the day. Everyone enjoyed a luxurious dinner together each evening on the ship and took the opportunity to share the experiences of the day.

Aroostook County Alumni Gather

Husson alumni, families, and friends gathered for a wonderful dinner on November 1, 2007 at the Caribou Inn and Convention Center. It was a great opportunity to share Husson experiences and hear about the current transformation of the campus and programs not only in Bangor, but in Portland and Presque Isle as well. The

Aroostook County Alumni gathering at the Caribou Inn and Convention Center

Husson Presque Isle Center, under the Direction of Carolyn Dorsey '91, '95, has experienced phenomenal growth over the last five years. It was great to celebrate in "the County."

Husson Eagles men and women's basketball teams were cheered on by alumni. An indoor tailgate party for all alumni, friends and family was generously sponsored by Merrill Bank. A lucky alumna went home with a gift certificate for dinner from Paddy Murphy's.

Young Alumni Club

The Husson Young Alumni Club enjoyed a busy fall and winter. In August, the Steering Committee hosted a Membership Meeting to plan events and programs for the year ahead. At the meeting they established several committees and recruited volunteers for events, programs, marketing, membership, and more. Based on membership feedback from the meeting, the mission and goals of the committee were established. To view them, visit www.husson.edu/alumni.

A financial planning forum was held in November for current Husson seniors and young alumni/ae. Presenters Joseph Alvarez '02 of VanceGray Wealth Management and Nathan Freeman '03 of Black Bear Trust shared tips and offered guidance to prepare the audience for their financial future.

Several new Steering Committee members were also welcomed. They include Wade Butler '03, Nathan

The Husson Young Alumni Club has been a great way for me to stay connected to Husson College. It has allowed me to network with young professionals who all share the connection of Husson College. I find this very valuable in helping me build my career by surrounding myself with people like you. It also is a great way to help the students of Husson and to shed a positive light in our community.

—Joseph Alvarez '02

Freeman '03, and Teddy Greeley '08. Allison Dugal '05 is serving as chair, Joseph Alvarez '02 is serving as vice chair, and Suz Norton '04 is serving as secretary.

The committee has set their calendar for the months ahead to include a forum focusing on finding a career, a trip to see the Sea Dogs, and much more. If you'd like to learn more about the Club and how you can become a member or volunteer on a committee, contact Amanda Kitchen at kitchen@husson.edu or 992-4925. Southern hospitality abounds with Husson alumni from Mt. Dora to Naples, Florida

Jack '07 & Bunny Quirk hosted an elegant reception at Baypointe in Naples Cay, Naples, Florida. It was a great evening for alumni, snowbirds and Florida residents, to reconnect. Trustees John Boucher and John Bragg shared exciting news of growth and expansion taking place at Husson today. Coach Bruce MacGregor and his wife Chris brought the Husson golf team to join in the reception. Alumni were excited to hear from current students about life today at Husson.

Southern charm was at its best at the quaint Lakeside Inn in Mt. Dora, Florida, where trustee Carol Kanar and her husband, Steve, hosted a lovely luncheon. Several of the alumna shared their experiences while at Husson in the 30's and 40's. Among the alumni attending was former Registrar Donna Townsend and her husband Merle. She shared many memories of her 36 years at Husson. Ed Darling, trustee, joined Carol in updating everyone with all the great changes taking place at Husson today.

Thank you, Florida alumni, for your Southern hospitality and charm.

We enjoyed meeting you and every minute we spent together. Now we look forward to welcoming you at the Husson campus.

Faculty Publications

Dr. Phil Grant's new book, The Mathematics of Human Motivation, is fresh off the press. Published by The University Press of America, this is a pioneering work—the first ever to develop a comprehensive quantitative framework for analyzing and predicting human motivation. Also, Grant has presented two papers, “Designing Incentive Systems to Maximize Profitability” and “Adjusting Reward Functions in Response to Productivity and Cost Change” at the annual conference of the National Business and Economics Society. Further, Phil Grant has submitted a significant challenge to the long accepted economic principle that company profit is maximized when marginal cost (MC) equates to marginal revenue (MR). He is presently assembling a formal mathematical proof.

Dr. Ben Sidaway, Professor of Physical Therapy and several Husson alumni recently has published a number of publications and presentations including: “Effects of Long-Term Gait Training Using Visual Cues in an Individual with Parkinson Disease” Physical Therapy, with Anderson, J., Danielson, G., Martin, L. & Smith, G.; “A Comparison of Manual Guidance and Knowledge of Results in the Learning of a Weight-Bearing Skill” Journal of Neurologic Physical Therapy, with Ahn, S., Boldeau, P., Griffin, S., Noyes, B., Pelletier, K.; “The Role of Postural Support in the Control of Kicking,” Journal of Sport & Exercise Psychology, with Bouchard M., Chasse, J., Dunn, J., Govoni, A., McPherson, B., & Roy, K; “Random And Blocked Practice Schedule Effects on Motor Skill Learning in Individuals With Parkinson’s Disease,” presented at the APTA’s Combined Sections Meeting with Gordon, R., Hopkins, M., Kershaw, M., Marean, C., & Wilkins, N.

Dr. Gail Tudor, associate professor of biostatistics, has followed up her publication on “Teaching Introductory Statistics Online – Satisfying the Students” in the Journal of Statistics Education (2006), with an article titled, “A Comparison of a Traditionally Taught Introductory Statistics Course with a Completely Online Version of the Same Course” in the Statistics Education Research Journal. She presented this research at the annual Joint Statistical Meetings in Salt Lake City, UT in July 2007 and was invited to return to speak on “Teaching Introductory Statistics Online” at the next Joint Statistical Meetings in August 2008. Also during the year 2007 she published peer reviewed articles on communication issues between physicians and patients in the following journals, International Journal of Pharmacy Practice, Journal of homosexuality, Arthritis Care & Research.

Dr. Elizabeth-Ellen Clark, RN, associate professor of nursing, has published “Speaking Your Mind: Measuring the Subjective Quality of Life of Children with Mental Illnesses, Issues” in Mental Health Nursing, 28: 1277-1291, 2007 Informa Healthcare, USA, Inc. and “We Care for all Animals!” American Journal of Nursing, Vol. 107 No. 11, 72AAA, November 2007.

Dr. Gregory Winston, associate professor of english, served as a guest panelist in the writing workshop for new doctoral students at Antioch-New England Graduate School in New Hampshire. He was also one of fifteen American university professors selected for “James Joyce’s Ulysses in Context,” a National Endowment for the Humanities six-week seminar held at Trinity College in Dublin, July-August 2007.

Professor Winston also has several publications premiering in 2008. “Britain’s Wild West: James Joyce’s Encounter with the Apache Chief,” in James Joyce Quarterly; “New Irish Identities: The Irish Short Story Since 1945,” and “Frank O’Connor: ‘Guests of the Nation’ and ‘My Oedipus Complex’,” both in The Blackwell’s Companion to the British and Irish Short Story.

Dr. Stephanie Gross, assistant professor of english, presented a paper at the American Literature Association in Boston in May, 2007 entitled: “The ‘Iron Cage’ of Acquisition: Veblen’s Conspicuous Consumption,” “Tasteless Amplitude,” and “Ascetic Rationalism in Cather’s ‘Flavia and Her Artists.’” This paper was solicited by editors at the Willa Cather Newsletter and Review and will be published in Fall 2008. She was also invited to present at the 11th Conference of the International Society for the Study of European Ideas in July, in Helsinki, Finland. The session is entitled “Science and the Sacred,” and the working title for her presentation is “Locating the Sacred in the Profane: Wordsworth’s and Baudelaire’s romantic re-enchantment of the everyday.”

Lisa Cyr Buchanan MS, FNP-C, CRRN holds an undergraduate degree from the University of Southern Maine, a Master of Science from Boston

University and a Post-Master’s Certificate from Husson College. Lisa teaches in the MSN and BSN programs. Lisa, a family nurse practitioner and a rehabilitation clinical nurse specialist, is founder and owner of LCB & Associates, an educational consulting firm. She also is a certified Rehabilitation Registered Nurse who has published in several rehabilitation journals and books. Lisa brings over 25 years of extensive clinical practice to her new role, including hospital nursing, home health nursing, nursing education, and as a rehabilitation CNS and FNP. Lisa also maintains a clinical practice at Stillwater Family Medicine.

Kenneth B. Johnson, Coordinator of chemistry labs and instructor will be published in the journal Applied Geochemistry, 2008: “A Comparison of Winter Mercury Accumulation at Forested and No-Canopy Sites Measured with Different Snow Sampling Techniques.” Authors: Sarah J. Nelson, Kenneth B. Johnson, Kathleen C. Weathers, Cynthia S. Loftin, Ivan J. Fernandez, Jeffrey S. Kahl, David P. Krabbenhoft.

Dr. Sandip LeeAnne Wilson, assistant professor in the School of Education, has served as chair of the Orbis Pictus Award Committee for Children's Nonfiction Literature of the National Council of Teachers of English. Her most recent publications include the article, "Getting Down to Facts: The Case for Sources in Children's Nonfiction Literature," a co-authored chapter, "Bold New Perspectives: Issues in Selecting and Using Nonfiction Literature," found in Shattering the Looking Glass: Challenge, Risk, and Controversy in Children's Literature, and a co-authored article, "A Study of Voice-Recognition Software as a Tool for Teacher Response." Her most recent reviews of professional books is "Perspectives on Critical Literacy: 'You Can't Step on Someone Else's Words,' yogurt cup experiments, Beanie Babies, theme park mathematics, and other experiences from the classroom." Her most recent review of children's literature is "The 2007 Orbis Pictus Award-winning, Honor, and Recommended Children's Nonfiction."

Dr. Clifton F. Guthrie, associate professor of religion and humanities "Quantitative Empirical Studies of Preaching: A Review of Methods and Findings," appeared in the Journal for Communication and Religion, 30 (March 2007): 65-117. Cliff attended the American Academy of Religion meeting in San Diego, California in November and plan to attend a meeting of the APA unit 36 (Psychology of Religion) February 29-March 1, 2008. He is also working on a book proposal for a ethics textbook that better suits the needs of Husson undergrads and incorporates the latest information from moral, evolutionary, and cognitive psychologies.

Dr. Lynn Gitlow, program director of occupational therapy was selected to participate in the AOTA/AOTF Leadership Mentoring Program for Occupational Therapy (OT) and Occupational Therapy Assistant (OTA) Program Directors. The competition was intense; supporting the critical need for mentoring in all aspects of the profession, but particularly in the area of academic leadership. Each applicant was ranked in all categories set forth in the program description including a clear articulation of their goals for future academic leadership. Dr. Gitlow's letter of nomination and CV were compelling and attest to her current and future commitment to academic leadership. She will be involved in a mentoring circle of colleagues during this nine-month experience.

It was a great fall to be an Eagle.

Every program competing in NAC play participated in a NAC Championship game, giving 75 student athletes an opportunity to win a championship. Football had back to back 6 win seasons and narrowly missed out on an ECAC Bowl bid. Athletics has always been a source of pride for the Husson Community and the Fall of 2007 was a season to remember.

Two programs won North Atlantic Conference Championship this fall. Women's Soccer and Golf both defended their titles as they repeated as NAC Champions. All the athletic programs in the fall finished the year with a winning record and in the top half of the conference standings. The NAC recognized 27 Eagles with all-conference awards including two NAC Player of the Year and two NAC Rookie of the Year.

The women's soccer program finished the season 14-7-1 and 9-1 in the NAC. They won the NAC title with a 1-0 road win over rival U. Maine of Farmington (UMF). The young Eagles had a shutout in all three conference tournament matches winning 4-0 over Maine Maritime Academy (MMA), 3-0 against Bay Path College, MA, and 1-0 in the championship against UMF. In thirteen conference games they had 10 shutouts and outscored their NAC opponents 45-4 on the season. The Eagles advanced to the NCAA III National Tournament, losing at Springfield College 3-0.

The Golf program once again dominated tournament play throughout the state and cruised to their 2nd straight NAC title and their third NAC title in four years. The Eagles won the State of Maine Golf Tournament for the third straight year. They won 7 out of 9 tournaments and finished fourth in the New England Intercollegiate Golf Association Tournament. The Eagles roster consisted of 10 student athletes all from the State of Maine. They will travel to the NCAA III National Tournament being held at Chateau Elan Resort (Braselton, GA) May 13-16.

Football recorded their second straight 6 win season finishing 6-3. The program finished their 5th season and is 12-7 over the past two seasons. The Eagles started the year out by defeating NCAA II Pace University 25-13. They won 4 of their first 5 games including a 39-13 homecoming win over Mount Ida College. The Eagles defense finished the year ranked #11 in the country in turnover margin. The NAC voted to sponsor football beginning in 2009 and there will be a conference championship game beginning in 2009. Husson will be joined by Mount Ida College, MA, Becker College, MA, Castleton State, VT, Norwich College, VT, SUNY-Maritime, NY, and Gallaudet University, MD.

Three other programs advanced to the NAC championship game. Field Hockey finished the year 12-5 and 7-1 in the NAC. The Eagles advanced to the NAC championship game losing to U. Maine Farmington 3-1. Volleyball finished the year 20-11 and 7-1 in the NAC. They advanced to the NAC championship coming up short to MMA 3-0. The Eagles recorded their 3rd 20 win season in the past four years. Men's Soccer had a solid year finishing 10-10 and 5-2-1 in the NAC. The Eagles played a very demanding non-conference schedule and it paid off in a run to the championship game. They lost to Castleton State 2-1 in the NAC final. Their season was highlighted by a trip to Atlanta, GA to start the season.

Women’s Basketball led the athletic department with a team GPA of 3.33. Field Hockey was next with a team effort of 3.17 GPA. Women’s Swimming and Softball both finished the fall semester with team GPA’s of 3.17.

“We are very proud of the sacrifice and commitment our student athletes make in order to obtain academic excellence.” Athletic Director Gabby Price states. “When you look at the time put into their respective sports and then to have the focus and energy to maintain academic success is something for us all to be proud of. I am really proud of our student athletes.”

When Larry Shaw '93 MSB

began working at MMG Insurance in 1982 he knew he had found the right place. He liked the work, he liked the people he worked with and he wanted to make it his career. As he found his role at the company was changing more into strategic management, he began looking for an opportunity to broaden his business thinking through education. When he heard about the Master of Science in Business program at Husson, then located in Caribou, he decided to give it a try.

“One of the very first teachers I had at Husson was Dr. Bob Smith,” said Larry, Husson Class of 1993. “He made all of us think in a deeper, more strategic way. We did a lot of case studies and he finally got it into my head to listen to different strategies for business and I understood that there is more than one way to solve many problems. I enjoyed every class I took with him. By the time I finished my master’s I knew I had the foundation I needed to build my leadership skills.”

Over the next few years Larry served in various capacities at MMG including COO, V.P., and Secretary. In 1995 he was named President and CEO. “I was able to take many of the theories I learned at Husson and put them to work in a real-world setting. My MSB from Husson helped me get where I am today.”

“I am very proud of the fact that this company, located in Aroostook County Maine, has been able to compete with insurance company giants from around the world. The reason for this is simple. Our competitive advantage comes with the level of customer service we provide. We have an extremely talented staff. More than half of our management team at MMG has a business degree from Husson. I think that speaks volumes.”

MMG, headquartered in Presque Isle, Maine has grown from $35 million in premium and $11.5 million in surplus in 1994 to over $110 million in premium and $63 million in surplus this year. They have gone from 60 to 150 employees and are considered a premier regional carrier.

Larry has been very active in his community. He currently serves as chairman of the board of Aroostook Partnership for Progress and on the Mark & Emily Turner Foundation Scholarship Committee. He is a past member of the Governor’s Board of Visitors for UMaine Presque Isle and of the Governor’s Financial Services Economic Development Group. He also served as president for TAMC Endowments. He lives in Presque Isle with his wife and three sons.

Physical Therapy faculty and staff are delighted to visit with some of our PT graduates, who have returned to earn their Doctor of Physical Therapy (DPT) degree! These graduates exemplify self-directed adult learning by taking a few additional courses to bridge the gap in knowledge between their MSPT degree and the new DPT degree. An added benefit to having this group on campus is to show off our rather new PT labs to those graduates who have not yet seen them. We heard more than a few say, "Wow! What a beautiful facility! The PT students are lucky to have such wonderful labs." The Physical Therapy faculty couldn't agree more.

■ Elizabeth Hoag Wood Turner RN '78 EMMC died January 21, 2008 at Brunswick surrounded by family and friends. At 19, she married Richard Wood with whom she went on to raise four children and a multitude of Jersey cows on their farm in Brunswick. In 1973 she purchased a farm in Monroe. That move provided the foundation of what would become a wonderful relationship and 30 year marriage to Alec Turner. Eighteen months at Maplewood Poultry convinced her that a career in nursing was in order, so at age 40 she enrolled in nursing school at Eastern Maine Medical Center. She quickly discovered that her calling was in substance abuse counseling rather than regular nursing. She established and ran addiction programs at Waldo County General Hospital for many years and went on to open her own counseling business. West Bay Counseling afforded her the opportunity to exercise her greatest joy in helping others heal. She retired in 2000 and soon began a complex dance with cancer. Elizabeth will be remembered as fiercely strong, both physically and emotionally, a dedicated student and teacher, a devoted wife and extraordinary mother and grandmother. She was fascinated by the world, was active in the community, served on various boards and volunteered her time generously. Survivors include her husband Alec, four children Becca Wood, Gib Wood, Anna Wood-Cox and Susan Wood and their families.
