

Excitement Builds as The O'Donnell Commons Nears Completion

"The O'Donnell Commons," a new $7 million, 40,000 square foot building, is steadily nearing completion on the Husson College Campus. The construction is generating excitement and anticipation on campus. College administrators, faculty and students alike are looking forward to exploring the finished product during the Fall 2005 semester.

Karl Ward, the project manager for the construction firm Nickerson & O'Day, Inc., expressed the importance of this new building in a recent interview. "This is a very important project for Husson. It gives the School of Education its own home. It gives the School of Health upgraded laboratories, and it gives Student Services a one-stop shopping environment for students. On top of all that, it provides Husson College with a new gateway and a new lecture hall. We're trying to accomplish a lot of things – a lot like Husson College itself actually – within a very tight time frame and budget."

Designed by WBRC Architects of Bangor, the O'Donnell Commons will beautifully enhance the campus landscape. The modern large glass doors and glass atrium that will extend to the third floor will serve to welcome visitors and make a positive statement about Husson's commitment to quality and growth.

The three-way collaboration between Nickerson & O'Day, Inc., WBRC and Husson has resulted in continuous progress towards the completion of the project, even through a cold and windy Maine winter. "We were handed a mission by Husson College to take what really should be done in about two years and get it done in about 11 months," Ward explained. "We knew that the only way we were going to finish this job on time was if construction started immediately. WBRC obtained environmental permitting in record time. It allowed us to break ground in October."

Furman Rebuilds Portland's Bayside

1972 Alum's Vision Leads to Business Success

Ross Furman, Class of 1972, is a classic Husson entrepreneur, seeing opportunity where others saw malaise. In Furman's case it was his decision to invest in Portland's Bayside and Marginal Way twenty five years ago, when others focused on the Old Port and the waterfront. Today, Portland is discovering Bayside, and Furman has become a major player and a tribute to his alma mater. This young man from Eastport, who worked his way through Husson, is today a case study of how success comes when an entrepreneur thinks and does things outside the box.

During the 50s, 60s and early 70s the 100-acre area between Interstate 295 and Congress Street known as Bayside became an area of industrial and urban decay. Portland's urban renewal was between Congress Street and the waterfront. Newly graduated from Husson and seeing low cost real estate and rapid interstate access along Marginal Way, Furman began to concentrate his video and amusement game business ventures into a deserted warehouse. Today his 6,000 square foot Skillful Vending showroom is the largest north of Boston. It is one of his twelve properties and five parking lots.

As construction has been completed phase by phase, visitors to the Husson campus have watched the progress with great interest. Ward had this to say concerning the “fast-track” construction process. “We asked WBRC to give us the foundational and structural steel design first, two months later give us the shell design of the building (which included the masonry, the exterior wall framing and the roof) and finally, two or three months later, deliver to us all of the interior design. That includes the walls, furnishings, the colors, basically what the final building will look like. Then, lastly, before spring thaw, deliver to us the site work design.”

With compliments to WBRC, Ward added, “They’ve pulled it off. They’ve met every deadline so far.”

Husson is looking forward to utilizing this building to give its students a competitive edge as they pursue their professional goals.

Thanks to a very generous gift from Alumnus and Trustee Robert D. O’Donnell ‘72/’82 we are able to have this cutting edge resource for our students who will eventually become the leaders of tomorrow.

Ben Haskell Assumes Leadership Role at NESCom

With the retirement of long time NESCom president George Wildey ‘83 MSB, Ben Haskell ‘81 MSB has been named Executive Vice President and Dean of the New England School of Communications. Haskell has been with NESCom since its inception in 1988.

“In the beginning there was George Wildey, Donna Thornton, our Administrative Assistant, and me,” said Haskell. “George was the President and I was the Director of the School (then known as the New England School of Broadcasting). The three of us did everything; admissions, teaching, college fairs and we swept up at the end of the day! I had 17 years in radio broadcasting when George asked me to give that up and help him start the school. George taught me everything I know about being in the field of education. I was lucky to have such a wonderful mentor,” said Haskell.

Haskell, who holds a BS in Speech from the University of Maine and a Master of Science in Business from Husson, said, “I am comfortable with this new position and I am enthusiastic about the challenge. I will do things a little differently from the way George did them, but I know I learned from the best.”

With the advent of technology the broadcasting business has changed dramatically. “Most of our students today are majoring in television or audio production, with web design quickly becoming our third most popular program,” said Haskell. “We still have 50-60 students in the radio program, with most of them interested in being on-air people either as a d.j. or in sports announcing.”

Haskell said “Our growth at NESCom is mirrored by the growth and excellence that Husson has achieved. We are proud to be part of their extended family. It is an exciting time to be involved with so many people doing so much good work.”

Ian Bean of Brownville, Maine, working in the NESCom studio, will graduate with his degree in T.V. Production in the Spring of 2006.

Todd Nadeau, Vice President for Development and Ross Furman ‘72 by the Bayside sign.

Even as he expanded his business, Furman made a determination that the surest way to improve the value of his property was to purchase the land around him, then to lease it to entrepreneurial tenants. In short, he has become a dominant player. “I have never been a developer, I am a rebuilder. Portland real estate is going out-of-sight. I have countered with rebuilding the low rent district. The $360/month studios have attracted as many as 500 entrepreneur/artisans of the new creative economy to Bayside with a backlog of inquiries. It’s a break-even situation at best but it is changing the image of the area from backwater to gateway and business success follows,” says Furman. The gateway concept is now attracting the likes of Gorham Savings Bank, which has a major new facility under construction right in the heart of Furman’s Unique Properties. He raised a sign that reads “Welcome to Bayside.” Furman’s next unorthodox step has been as a commercial investor, to join the Bayside (Homeowners) Neighborhood Association. “These homeowners operate family businesses. It all fits together,” said Furman.

Ross lives in Falmouth Foreside with his wife Jennifer, son Yates, and daughters Victoria and Morgan. With his business success he has also returned much to the community. His rebuilding endeavors have enriched his love of local history, and he has become actively involved in the Falmouth Historical Society. He remains fiercely loyal to Eastport and Downeast Maine. He has become involved at Husson and has recently pledged a lead gift for a much needed student lounge and recreation center on the Bangor Campus, to be called The Furman Center. “I want to return something to the college because it got me on my way. I cannot think of a better place to help out than seed money for a student lounge and recreation center. Recreation is my field of work,” he said.

A Message from the President

HUSSON

PRESIDENT'S OFFICE
One College Circle • Bangor, Maine 04401-2999
207-941-7138

Dear Friends,

Great nations, faiths, businesses and families have their histories, stories and myths. Husson is no exception.

Husson, a tiny school of business and penmanship and a tiny nursing school, emerged out of the industrial revolution and the vision of Florence Nightingale. Founder Frank Shaw's commitment was to aspiring students of limited means. As a boy, Chesley Husson slept on a pool table at the YMCA in Lynn, Massachusetts, and dreamed of a college that would bear his name. Clara Swan's tough love kept rough and tumble students in school who then went on to seek their fortunes and serve their fellow man. The stories of the veterans coming back to Husson, Greek Life, Job Corps, the role of Margaret Chase Smith in helping the college get degree granting authority, the presence of Husson at the 5000th Anniversary of the Persian Empire, Susan Collins' successful run for the United States Senate from the Richard E. Dyke Center for Family Business, the myriad of faculty, coaches, and staff who left their marks on students and the students who left their marks on the college are legend. Just consider the two honorary doctoral recipients this past May: Norma McNeill James '43, the daughter of a Millinocket minister who has spent her past fifty years dedicating her life to volunteer service with nonprofit agencies of Southern California; and Bob O'Donnell '72, MSB '82, from a family of eleven children in Van Buren, Maine, who has become a New Jersey de novo bank executive extraordinaire. Husson's history is a gold mine of memories that helps explain what Husson is today and what it means to have a Husson education.

Today Husson is in transformation: doctoral degrees, new buildings, 600 new undergraduates and record enrollments this coming fall, new sports teams, new accreditation, new faculty, new ties to the Bangor Theological Seminary and the Northern Conservatory of Music. The list goes on and on. But, in such heady times, it is equally important to retell the myths and stories and histories of Husson -- where Husson came from, the mosaic of faculty, students, administration, facilities, milestones, crises and transforming events. Why? Because so much of Husson's success today is founded in its roots, its sense of mission, its alumni and its reason for being. As Shakespeare wrote, "the past is prologue to the future."

It is no accident that this Husson publication is called "The Ledger."

COMMENCEMENT 2005

O'Donnell, James Receive Honorary Doctorates

Robert O'Donnell, '72, '82 was born and raised in Van Buren, Maine. He worked his way through Husson earning a BS in Business Administration and later a Master of Science in Business. He worked as Director of Financial Aid at Husson and served as Chief Financial Officer at Bangor Theological Seminary. He began his banking career and rose through the ranks of Merrill Bank and Peoples Bank to Director and Executive Vice President of Amboy National Bank of New Jersey. During that time he earned an MBA from the University of Wisconsin.

In 1998, with investors at his side, he purchased the Community Bank of New Jersey. He was elected CEO and President and broke the mold of banking with evening and weekend hours, unique locations and customer focus. When he sold the bank in 2004 for $80 million, at 34 times earnings-per-share, this price was the highest earnings multiple ever paid for a bank in New Jersey, with a five-year return to investors of 248 percent as assets rose from $24 to $484 million. During that time, he served a three-year term on the Federal Reserve of New York and was invited to lecture at the Wharton School at the University of Pennsylvania.

Bob is married to his childhood sweetheart Donna, and they have two sons, Rogan and Brendan. They live in Perrineville, New Jersey, where they are active in their community. Bob is a trustee of Husson College and will soon serve a term as chairman of the Board of Centra Healthcare Systems of New York. Bob's mother, children and many of his brothers and sisters attended the ceremony.

Norma McNeill James, '43 was raised in northern Maine and graduated from Husson College in 1943. After college she moved to Virginia to pursue a career in insurance and then met and married a young Naval Officer named Oliver James. Together they moved to San Diego where Oliver rose to the rank of Commander and later became Executive Vice President and Chief Operating Officer of San Diego Trust and Savings Bank. They were blessed with a son, Oliver B. James, III.

As San Diego began to grow, Norma found extraordinary opportunities for community service. As Chair of The Committee, a select group of women leaders, she became a prominent fundraiser for the Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation. Her love of children led her to the San Diego Children's Hospital, where she was instrumental in raising millions of dollars for pediatric programs and cancer research.

Norma has volunteered with and raised funds for the San Diego Symphony, San Diego Boy Scouts, the La Jolla Playhouse, the Museum of Art and the American Heart Association. The San Diego County Salvation Army awarded her the prestigious title of "Woman of Elegance," one of the region's most esteemed recognitions for volunteer service. Mrs. James has created a Norma McNeill James Endowment Fund at Husson which provides need-based college scholarships for the youth of Maine, another testament to her endless thoughtfulness and generosity.

Mrs. James received her doctoral degree and hood in a private ceremony in La Jolla, California, on May 28, 2005, attended by President and Mrs. William Beardsley, Terri Sleeper, Oliver James and son O.B. and two previous honorary doctoral degree recipients, Forrest Shumway and James Carlisle, '64 and his wife Carol.

Husson Student Athletes Excel in the Classroom

Husson student athletes excelled not only on the playing field, but in the classroom during the fall semester. 76 Husson student-athletes attained a fall semester GPA of 3.0 or higher, while 25 of those 76 student-athletes achieved a GPA of 3.5 or higher.

“We are extremely proud of all the student athletes at Husson College. We congratulate the 76 student athletes who have attained a GPA of 3.0 or higher for the fall semester,” states Husson College Athletic Director Gabby Price. “They represent the very best in our quest for excellence in academics and athletics.”

Leading the way were four students that each received a 3.94 mark for the semester: Danielle Billings (Women’s Soccer), Nick Henry (Men’s Basketball), Sonya McCarthy (Volleyball), and Annie McIntosh (Women’s Basketball).

The student-athletes with the highest GPA for the fall semester from each of Husson’s ten intercollegiate teams were recognized at an Academic Excellence Luncheon on April 19th. The student-athletes recognized were: Danielle Billings (Women’s Soccer), Nick Henry (Men’s Basketball), Kyle Kamal (Men’s Soccer), Lance Libby (Golf), Sonya McCarthy (Volleyball), Annie McIntosh (Women’s Basketball), Nicole Munroe (Softball), Adam Sheehan (Baseball), Mike Simpson (Football), and Sarah Skinner (Field Hockey). Of the 239 student-athletes at Husson, 72 have a cumulative GPA of 3.0 or higher. One of the improvements Husson has made to help student athletes succeed academically is the addition of a student athlete study center. A generous donation from Husson Trustee John Boucher ‘66 helped the Athletic Department to refinish the room and purchase five computers and printers. Located in Newman Gymnasium, the study center provides student athletes with a quiet place to work and complete study hall requirements.

Assistant Athletic Director for Student Services and Wellness, Nat Clark, oversees the study center and has seen the impact it has had on the student athletes.

“We continue to look for ways to provide our student athletes with the resources and support necessary to help them achieve academic success. Many student athletes use the study center before and after practice because it’s conveniently located, which aids in their time management,” states Nat Clark.

The Eagle student athletes that attained a GPA of 3.0 or higher for the fall semester are as follows:

Baseball: Samuel Adolphsan, Aaron Brideau, Phil Cayford, Barrett Dionne, Nate Ellis, Andy Ham, Shawn Henderson, Andrew Patterson, Devin Potvin, Adam Sheehan, John Tefft, Dan White & Shin Yamauchi.

Habitat for Humanity

During Spring Break 2005 a group of students, led by Husson Residence Director Rebecca Lindley, served with Habitat for Humanity's "Collegiate Challenge" program. The Husson group didn't just talk the talk of the importance of community service, they "walked the walk" at a home building site in Myrtle Beach, South Carolina. The students that participated in this alternative to the traditional spring break came back feeling empowered with the knowledge that they helped to make a difference.

"Through the Collegiate Challenge, students from colleges around the country go to a location to volunteer to help build homes for people who might otherwise not be able to afford them," Lindley explains. "The woman whose home we worked on is employed at a Subway restaurant. She has a son and grandfather to support. The experience was really powerful for our students, learning about people whose lives are really different from theirs. The group had such an awesome experience that we're going to help with a Habitat for Humanity project right here in Bangor throughout the coming year. We're going to open the opportunity to other students too."

Husson & EMH Collaborate

A unique cooperative relationship between Husson College and Eastern Maine Healthcare (EMH) aids both businesses in keeping up with the science of gross anatomy.

Dr. Ben Sidaway, Professor of Physical Therapy and director of the anatomy lab at Husson, and Dr. Ken Johnson of EMH have created a program known as the Neuromusculoskeletal Fellowship. At Husson, physical therapy students learn gross anatomy skills as part of their extensive education. EMH's advanced residency doctors also need to continually hone their anatomy skills.

"Physicians in the fellowship rotate through various areas in sort of an advanced residency program," Sidaway explained. "One of the things they really like to do is a review of their anatomy. We have one of only two gross dissection labs in Maine. They come here to teach and perform dissections as a demonstration and model for our physical therapy students. They are able to relate the instruction to real clinical scenarios."

"We're pleased with this collaboration and affiliation. It's a win-win situation with our clinical students and Dr. Johnson's physicians," said Dr. Sidaway.

Nursing Students Visit Honduras

Nursing students from the Transcultural Nursing class taught by Husson Assistant Professor Mary Tedesco-Schneck visited Honduras during the month of June. They traveled with a group called Mission Discovery, a Christian organization whose mission is to build homes for people who lost their homes in 1998 to Hurricane Mitch.

The students and Professor Tedesco-Schneck provided health care to approximately 400 patients in a small village 45 minutes outside of Tegucigalpa, the capital of Honduras. They also did vision screening, and, with the help of an optician, fitted approximately 60 people with eyeglasses. They provided health care and teaching to both children and adults.

"My plan is to go every year with a group of students," said Tedesco-Schneck. "There is no better classroom than to get into the field and do real work with real people. The cost to the students was $1,500 each, so I need to do some fundraising to help defray those costs in the future," she said.

When they returned the students presented slides and related stories about their trip and their experiences in a very well attended gathering in Kominsky Auditorium.

Bangor Theological Seminary to share Husson Campus

President William Beardsley of Husson and President William Imes of Bangor Theological Seminary sign the co-location agreement at a ceremony held on campus on Tuesday, July 19, 2005. The Seminary will be moving into the south wing of Bell Hall during the month of August.

School of Business Receives Accreditation

At the annual conference of the International Assembly for Collegiate Business Education, the Board of Commissioners announced the granting of specialized accreditation of business degree programs to Husson College. The accreditation certificate they presented to Robert B. Kuhn, Dean of the School of Business, and David Casavant, Assistant Dean for the School of Business, recognizes the achievement of quality in the academic business programs. Quality assurance is measured by the accomplishment of the school's mission and broad-based goals, the effectiveness of student learning that takes place and the operational effectiveness of the business unit.

Husson joins a growing list of nearly 200 IACBE member institutions in the United States and internationally that support quality assurance in education.

Husson Center to Administer Toy Testing

Operated by Husson College and United Cerebral Palsy of Maine, the Technical Exploration Center (TEC), an assistive technology program that lends equipment and provides evaluations, resource materials, technical assistance and assistive technology related training to people with disabilities and their caregivers, has been named as one of six centers in the United States to conduct toy evaluations for the Toy Industry Association. They will be working with children with disabilities and their parents to provide the information needed for the 2006 "Let's Play" toy guide. The Toy Guide helps people choose toys that are appropriate and fun for children with disabilities. The guide also contains instructions on how some toys can be adapted for use by these special needs children.

O'Keefe Softball Complex Dedicated

Husson Applauds Generosity of Bob & Frances O'Keefe

Frances O'Keefe throwing out the first pitch.

On Saturday, April 16, 2005, Husson College officially opened the new Robert & Frances O'Keefe Softball Complex.

"The generosity of Bob and Frances O'Keefe has given Husson the opportunity to have a softball facility that will be second to none in the State of Maine," said Athletic Director Gabby Price. "Our student-athletes deserve the best facilities and now our softball team will have just that."

Designed by WBRC Architects and built by Maine Earth, Inc., the first phase of the O'Keefe Complex has been completed. The second phase, which will include dugouts, a press box, additional seating and fencing is scheduled for completion in 2006/2007.

A native of Old Town, Bob O'Keefe graduated from Husson with a BS in Business in 1967 and later earned a Master of Science in Management from SUNY Albany. He began his career with Shell Oil, Baxter Steritex Corporation. From 1979 until 1995, Bob served as regional sales manager for Angelica Textile Corporation. Though semi-retired, Bob continues his association with Angelica as a consultant. Bob and Frances live in Gilderland, New York.

"Our team is so excited to be able to play on this beautiful new field," said Coach Charlie Hamel. "The O'Keefes have made it possible for us to offer our players a state-of-the-art facility, a field they can truly be proud of."

Husson Introduces Women's Varsity Swimming Program

Coach Krystal Fogler at the Husson pool.

Husson College Athletic Director Gabby Price has announced that Husson will begin the process of establishing a varsity women's swimming program. Former UMaine swimming star Krystal Fogler has been named as Head Coach. Fogler, who will be a full time employee of the college, will oversee all pool operations and scheduling and will continue as Director of the Swan Fitness Center.

"Whenever you are looking to establish a new program the key is leadership," said Price. "With Krystal we have the person we want to lead this program and build it into a competitive team. We are impressed with her knowledge of the sport, her experience and her desire to coach. We are confident that we have the right person for the job."

Coach Fogler received her BS in Kinesiology and Physical Education at UMaine and is pursuing an MS in Exercise Science. Fogler competed in swimming at UMaine for three years and still holds a number of competitive records there. She was named America East Swimmer of the Year in 2000 and 2001 and was named UMaine female athlete of the year in 2002. This past season she has coached swimming at Old Town High School.

"I love swimming," said Fogler. "I am excited to have this opportunity to coach at Husson. I've worked here since last fall in the fitness center, and I've come to understand the college's commitment to excellence in all areas, including athletics. Adding women's swimming to Husson's athletic programs is a natural. We have an excellent pool and gym facility, and there is great interest from current students about the team. The athletic department has committed to redoing a locker room and office space for swimming and I can't wait to get started."

"With all the outstanding swimming programs at Maine high schools, I know Husson Swimming will be able to build a strong competitive program in a short amount of time," she said. "The feeder program is there, I just need to get out on the road and do some recruiting. I am not taking on this challenge for the fun of it. I intend and expect to build a winning program in the tradition of Husson athletics."

Plans for joining a conference and discussions about scheduling for the Fall of 2005 are ongoing.

Women's Soccer Team is California Dreamin'

by Keith Bosley, Head Women's Soccer Coach

What won't you do to find a little sun in March in Maine? After what seemed to be the longest, coldest, snowiest winter in years, the Husson Women's Soccer Team was certain that the selection of San Diego as the destination for their spring break training trip was the perfect choice. Traveling from Bangor to anywhere warm is an ordeal that feels like penance, and the twenty two hour trek to San Diego was no exception. When we arrived at our hotel a little past midnight the stars were shining, there was a light warm breeze and the temperature was sixty degrees. Yea, this is going to be perfect. Better than perfect!

Dude, This Place is Awesome.....

San Diego is at the extreme southern tip of California, hugging the Pacific coast and bordering Mexico. The daytime temperature is always between sixty-five and eighty five degrees. The grass is green. The ocean is blue. The palms sway. Life is good every day. One's first impression is "I could live here. I want to live here."

It is very obvious that many people do. Twelve lane highways go everywhere and traffic is always packed like a full parking lot at eighty miles an hour. The beaches are always crowded with sun bathers and surfers and retirees.

Restaurants, bars, hotels, parks. People everywhere all the time. Fortunately, there exists a mellowness that East Coast folks don't share and that is what makes it all work. It is an amazingly and delightfully diverse population.

People from all over the world are drawn to Southern California. The result is a blend of Asian, Latin, Middle Eastern, African and European faces and voices. This has to be the true American "Melting Pot." Southern California culture has embraced, blended and celebrated this diversity. Nowhere is that more evident than the food. Where else can you get a fish taco? Or sushi at a baseball game? Or Panamanian beans at the farmer's market? Two of our local favorites were the Sunshine Donut Shop (run by a Thai-Mexican blended family) that had powder sugar dusted, custard filled pastries we called "bombers" at three for a buck and Hamberto's where you could get a fresh, giant roasted chicken burrito with beans and rice and a pineapple soda for about four bucks.

Beaches in California run from Mexico to Los Angeles. Our favorite was Mission Beach in San Diego. It had a boardwalk, white sand and great surf. In fact, every beach had great surf while we were there due to a storm in the Pacific. All the surfers were out and many of the women on our team decided to join them. We rented boards and wet suits and jumped in. What a blast! We instantly formed the Husson College Surfing Team. Many of the players did very well, often standing-up for extended rides. I, on the other hand, looked like an elephant seal floating on a piece of driftwood.

Of course we visited the world famous San Diego Zoo and Tijuana (exciting and scary) and Hollywood (exciting and scary), Old Towne San Diego, The Gas Light District and Balboa Park. All were great and worth seeing. Always remember: everytime, everywhere it was always warm and usually sunny.

Southern California and the American Women's Soccer Style

A major reason for our selection of San Diego for our training trip was to have the opportunity to train with and compete against some of the premier players and coaches in the United States. Specifically we trained with the San Diego Surf U18s and the San Diego Hot Spurs U18s. The Surf are coached by Colin Chesters who has twice won Premier national titles. (This month they won the California U18 2005 Premier Title). The Hot Spurs are coached by Sami Nedjar and includes the U18 National ODP Team keeper.

In friendly games the Surf buried us and we battled the Hot Spurs to a 1-0 loss. Best of all we got to experience what might be the prototypical American women's style of soccer. The players were big, physical, athletic and very fit. They were fit because they had just finished their school season. In California, soccer is a winter sport. Technically every player is very sound. They're not Coever-like robots but more fluid and creative in their touches. Play is always heads-up and aggressive. Given an opportunity at 30-35 yards a midfielder or attacker will take the shot. There are no passive attempts to dribble into the goal. The result was the necessity for our defense to come up and out and meet the attack very high while still remaining compact at the point of attack. We took the Surf game to learn and executed during the Hot Spur game. We had to snap-counter very quickly with numbers to create scoring chances. The experience was great!

Each training site was more than adequate but in no way a soccer palace. The most beautiful place we trained was at Point Loma Nazarene College. All the athletic fields hung on a cliff overhanging the Pacific Ocean. We practiced with the sound of the surf in the background. Speaking of training sites, we had the opportunity to visit the U.S. Olympic Training Center in National City. Even though there were few athletes in residence while we were visiting it was still great to walk the grounds and view the facilities.

See America - Play Soccer

All of us who are responsible for the coaching and administration of soccer teams think (dream) about taking our teams overseas to train, play and tour. Certainly I've done it. Last year I brought my team to Italy. It was fantastic. I know we'll go to Europe again. In the meantime, however, there is an awful lot of America to see. It's a big, diverse place and exploring it can be a great joy. Equally exciting is the opportunity to explore different styles of soccer played in different areas of the country. Playing in Southern California opened our eyes to new approaches to old problems. While there we saw great places, great people and great soccer. See America - play soccer.

P.S. Next year, Texas.

DOUGLAS H. BROWN: HUSSON TRUSTEE, MENTOR & FRIEND 1929-2005

Doug Brown was a grocer who never went to college but in the last quarter of the twentieth century he became part of the Husson story.

Doug joined the Husson board in 1978 when the college was challenged by low enrollment and excessive debt. He used his community influence to bring about the merger of the Eastern Maine Medical Center School of Nursing into Husson, thereby giving birth to the Husson School of Health. He arranged for the lease of Bell Hall to Job Corps which provided critical cash flow in a time in need. He led a campaign to repay the federal debt that was a financial millstone around the college's neck, and he established the need-based Doug and Ana Brown Scholarship Fund which has provided financial assistance to over 100 nursing and business students.

Born in Lubec, Doug was a boy of the depression, who started odd jobs at age five and became manager of a grocery store before he turned 20. He built a chain of many Doug's Shop 'n Save Super Markets before selling out to Hannafords in the 1990s, but he will be equally remembered for his leadership role at Husson, the hospital and his generosity towards the service agencies of eastern Maine. Doug got married and went to work and church instead of college. Yet, in many ways, Husson became Doug's alma mater, its board member, chair, mentor, friend and financial benefactor. Husson honored Doug with a honorary doctor of Humane Letters degree and the Chesley H. Husson award for service. Doug honored Husson with stained glass windows for our Chapel. The windows are sealed with words that have served in his life: "Blessed is the man that trusteth the Lord and whose hope the Lord is." The Husson myth and story is formed of just such lives. May Doug rest in peace.

AROUND THE CIRCLE

Dr. Gail Dechman, Physical Therapy, has several research presentations, including:

Publications:

Gail Dechman and CR Wilson. Evidence underlying breathing retraining in people with stable chronic obstructive pulmonary disease. Physical Therapy. December 2004. (Volume 84, pages 1189-1197)

Gail Dechman. Outcome measures in cardiopulmonary physical therapy. The shuttle walk test. Cardiopulmonary Physical Therapy Journal. April 2005

Presentations:

Exercise and interstitial lung disease. Presented at the Canadian Physiotherapy Association's Annual Congress. Victoria, British Columbia, May 27, 2005.

Husson College has been well-represented in the physical therapy profession during this past year. Four physical therapy faculty presented peer-reviewed research at the American Physical Therapy Association's Combined Sections Meeting in New Orleans, Feb. 24-27, 2005.

Cheryl Adams presented a research project that she conducted with three Husson graduates, Jessica Hilt, Tanya Stinson and Nicole Smalley entitled A Study of the Reliability of the Physical Therapist Clinical Performance Instrument.

Suzanne Gordon and Karen Morren presented two of their program outcomes studies as posters. The first study, called An Emergent Mission: Examining the Use of Focus Groups to Support a Culture of Assessment, found that students described their clinical successes similarly to the program's mission statement. Suzanne and Karen were joined by a third person, Peg Olson, in conducting the second study, The Effectiveness of Qualitative Research in Assessing Program Outcomes. This study provided evidence of adjunct faculty, clinical instructor, employer, and alumni satisfaction with the physical therapy curriculum.

In addition, both Karen Morren and Suzanne Gordon were honored at this conference by the APTA's Section for Education. Karen Morren was honored at an awards ceremony for earning her Clinical Instructor Train-the-Trainer certification. Suzanne received a $2,500 Adopt-A-Doc scholarship award in support of her dissertation titled An Exploration of Educators' Perceptions Concerning the Multicultural Education of Students in New England Physical Therapist Program.

Physical Therapy faculty also present their research and share their expertise at professional conferences that are more discipline specific. In April, Suzanne Gordon, along with two cohorts in educational leadership, presented a research paper at the American Education Research Association Conference in Montreal called Rethinking Practices of Power: The Discursive Framing of Leadership in Postsecondary Education.

Dr. Ben Sidaway presented the results of a study which examined the role of feedback in jumping. The study was Learning to Reduce Impact Forces during Landings: The Role of Feedback Frequency on Kinetics and Kinematics.

Experimental Determination of Anomalous Skin Depth in Free Electron and Non-Free Electron Metals was presented at Bates College by Dr. Heidar A. Kashkooli, Husson College, Bangor, ME, Charles W. Smith, University of Maine, Orono, ME and Paul J. Dolan, Jr., Northeastern Illinois University, Chicago, IL.

The measurements of classical and anomalous skin depth for silver wire, nickel wire and nickel coated carbon fiber were presented,

The skin depth in silver, as a function of wire radius, shows the expected classical behavior at room temperature and power law dependence at liquid nitrogen temperature. The skin depth for nickel, a non-free electron metal, shows almost no temperature dependence, but agrees with the classical expected value. The nickel coated carbon fiber shows neither classical nor anomalous skin depth for the frequency range used in this study.

Dr. Phil Grant tells us, "This past year has been extremely productive for me. The University Press Of America published my ninth book, The Law of Escalating Marginal Sacrifice. 'This book is the outgrowth of 25 years spent verifying this fundamental law of human behavior which I first proposed in 1976. Also, during this year, I have presented and had published two papers with the National Business and Economics Society: Integrating the Theory of the Firm With the Theory of Individual Behavior and Explaining Heretofore Unresolved Motivation Phenomena. I have also been voted into Who's Who Among America's Teachers. My biggest project has been my nearly completed tenth book, The Mathematics of Human Motivation. This book uses algebraic, statistical, probability, differential calculus and integral calculus techniques to develop a synthesis of multiple motivation phenomena as identified by the Effort-Net Return model (which incorporates the Law of Escalating Marginal Sacrifice). Further, I have just finished and had accepted for publication an article titled, Optimizing the Distribution of Effort Under Constraints."

White House Chief of Staff, Andy Card with President William Beardsley and Terri Sleeper of the Alumni & Development Office. Mr. Card was attending the Maine Heritage Conference on the Husson Campus on June 24, 2005.

Dr. Paul Curtis, former Husson faculty member, joined a delegation of Korean War Veterans to celebrate the 50th Anniversary of the signing of a mutual defense treaty between the United States and the Republic of Korea.

Paul was an infantryman with the Fifth Regimental Combat Team who were engaged in an eight day assault by an entire Chinese Communist division. He had mixed feelings about returning to Korea, but he is happy that he went. The Americans got VIP treatment from start to finish and were presented a medal for their wartime service.

We hope you'll join us for a fun-filled week at our nation's capital!

The single greatest and most sacred responsibility we share is to assure the optimal education to those who follow. We as an institution have an obligation to provide our young people with the very best learning environment that we can. We ourselves drank from the cup. Now we must refill it.

Every generation of Husson students relies on the generosity of those who have gone before them...
